Dear Tim

As you are aware the Timber Promotion Council believes underfloor insulation is not necessary as timber is a natural insulator.

However underfloor insulation is an option that is now available. Due to our independence the Timber Promotion Council cannot normally recommend one product over another but if underfloor insulation is desired then the most suitable system is concertina FOIL BATTS.

We regard the FOIL BATTS to be the best form of underfloor insulation. This product will fit between the floor joists allowing the floor to breathe, whilst the perforations will prevent any condensation buildup that may form.

I wish you commercial success with this product.

Regards
